Pacific Northwest Ballet—3 by Dove

"I am interested in passion," Dove said about his work. "In every embrace, every second of life [should be] lived so fully that there can be no regrets, no retreats, no looking back" (Connoisseur). The late Ulysses Dove (1947–1996) documented life in dance and left a legacy that speaks with Teutonic energy, relentless drive, and open desire.

Red Angels—Four dancers confront the audience in a series of scorching solos and duets and then walk away into a fiery landscape, arms raised like wings.

Vespers—Six women draw on Dove's memories of his grandmother's congregation, their strength in harmony, and their determined struggle to reach the light.

Serious Pleasures—A PNB premiere, Dove uses light to create doorways and pathways to the social turmoil of the 80's, where human isolation, alienation, and intersection are portrayed with stunning clarity and signature athleticism.

Contemporary dance-fusion choreographer Victor Quijada credits Dove among those who have inspired his work. Quijada's Suspension of Disbelief, a 2006 world premiere, also joins the program. "The energy was loose and twisty, a sped-up chain of unexpected movements, seemed impossibly fluid. The audience roared approval." (The Seattle Times).

Pacific Northwest Ballet—All Balanchine

When George Balanchine came to America in 1933, he found a country that knew little about ballet. Inspired by America's freedom, youth, and modern vitality, he wholeheartedly adopted his new home and through a prodigious outpouring of works, shaped in part by limited resources, he removed layers of classical ballet's conventional excess. PNB pays tribute to the greatest choreographer of the 20th century and its own artistic heritage with all Balanchine, a mixed-bill homage to the man who revolutionized an art form in ways that have changed it forever.

Balanchine's first American ballet, Serenade (1934), was choreographed for his students. An ideal manifestation of Tchaikovsky's soaring Serenade for Strings, its transcendent purity endures and renews itself as a primary testament to the choreographer's genius. Square Dance (1957) knits classical ballet with the patterns and partnerings of 17th-century court and American folk dance for a buoyant, intricate work, notable for its celebrated male solo. The Four Temperaments (1946), a quintessential "black and white" Balanchine ballet, is an early experiment in spare abstraction based on mythological belief in four personality types. Here, in a series of plotless variations executed by dancers in practice clothes on a bare stage, Balanchine proclaims a new era in ballet with some of the most uniquely composed and distinctly evocative images ever created.

Seattle Opera Presents—Falstaff

The merry wives of Windsor unite in mischief-making when an ignoble nobleman plots to plunder their savings in this inventive creation capping Verdi's career. A true ensemble tour-de-force, Falstaff improves upon the original Merry Wives script, keeping the sweet young lovers subplot and adding the knight's most pithy observations from Henry IV for good measure. Equal parts orchestral virtuosity and riotously paced comedy, the opera is a perfect fusion of renaissance realism and light-hearted fantasy.

New Year's Health Resolutions for 2010

By George Gey, M.D. and Jeanette Dunn, Ed.D., R.N.

It's the new year and time for some wellness care resolutions. In the spirit of healthcare reform, let's reform the way we look at our own health. Health care costs are out of sight and the government is looking for solutions. We are part of the problem so let's be part of the solution. Here are some ideas:

- Find yourself a medical "home"—a primary care provider who not only knows you but keeps all of your medical records. Get a medical check up once a year. Write down all the questions you have regarding your health before you see the provider and make sure that you get the answers. If you have special follow-up exams, make the appointments and put them on your calendar.
- Write out all of your medications and supplements, including dosages and give this to your primary care provider. Keep a copy of it with you, especially if you travel. Update it when necessary.
- Take your medications as prescribed and report any unwanted side effects to your health care provider.
- Eat nutritious foods, not fast foods. Include lots of fruits and veggies. Don't overeat.
- Drink plenty of water, especially in hot weather.
- Exercise at least 30 minutes each day. Weigh yourself at least once a month and know what your ideal weight should be so that you know if you are gaining or losing too much or too rapidly.
- Get you vision and hearing exams, breast and colon exams, Pap smears, and prostate checks on a regular basis according to the recommendation of your primary care provider.
- Keep your immunization records up-to-date.
- Make sure that you have Advanced Directives and a Durable Power of Attorney. Now there is a state records office that will store your advanced directives and have them accessible by medical care providers during an emergency.
- Let's care about and for ourselves in this new health care year. Be mindful of the four D's—drinking, dementia, depression, and drug addiction. These can be major problems as we age.❖

Thanks From Childhaven

BMA held two wooden toy making parties in 2009. A total of 18 volunteers completed 342 toys. The toys were delivered to Childhaven in October for distribution to their four branches, Broadway Center, Seattle, Eli Creekmore Memorial, Burien, Patrick L. Gogerty, Auburn, and Lake City Center. The children were going to paint the wooden toys in the classroom.

Below is the thank you note from Childhaven. Photo's of the children painting the toys can be found on the Gold Card web site.

BMA Gold Card members, Thank You for the wonderful gift of wooden toys! The teachers at our four branches are thrilled with your generosity, and to use the toys for fun projects with the kids!

Education

Next City—Leveling the Playing Field Helping Poor Children Succeed

The Graduate School at the University of Washington proudly presents the 2009-10 public lecture series. The focus of the coming series is Next City—Sustainable Urbanization.

Today, half of the world's populations live in cities; by 2030, an additional five billion people will have joined them. Hear from some of the country's top voices on urban issues and explore one of the great challenges of the 21st century.

The UW has made "sustainable urbanization" a major focus for the coming academic year. This series, along with the Provost Lecture, will discuss sustainable living and the future of our cities.

Geoffrey Canada has a radical new idea: if you really want to change the lives of inner-city kids, change everything all at once—their schools, families, and neighborhoods. As president and CEO of the revolutionary Harlem Children's Zone in New York City, Canada has dedicated the past 20 years of his life to helping the most impoverished, at-risk youth beat the odds. Radically ambitious and startlingly simple, Canada's programs are on the cutting edge of preventing youth violence and fostering community development.

Sustainable Urbanization—Panel Discussion

What makes an event a catastrophe? For whom is it catastrophic? And how does framing an event as an urban catastrophe change the discussion and response? Panelists explore these questions through examples ranging from the financial crisis and Hurricane Katrina to the WTO and global health. They will consider the structural forces that may precipitate urban crises, how such crises are framed, and who profits from them, as well as the role of engaged citizenship in moving us towards greater democratic accountability in urban governance. Audience members are encouraged to participate in the discussion and bring questions for the panelists.

Navigating the Storm—Managing Your Retirement in Uncertain Times

We live in uncertain times. Stock market declines, bank failures, corporate bankruptcies, the falling dollar, deflation, inflation, pension collapses, and Social Security insolvency are all topics that dominate the press and may unsettle even the most confident of retirees. Investors have seen their savings expand, contract, and whipsaw again over the past several years.

As we look forward to our golden years, one simple question stands out what are we supposed to do now? This workshop is designed to offer you perspective and possible solutions to many concerns impacting Boeing retirees. In this seminar we will cover:

- The common predators that prey on retirees
- Possible solutions to the three biggest threats facing retirees
- Possible solutions to needless retirement planning disasters
- Restructuring your retirement investments and income

Navigating the Storm™ is an interactive seminar experience. Instead of simply "listening" to a presentation you will have an opportunity to respond directly to key planning questions and make real-time decisions on your retirement plans. If you desire, your decisions will be recorded and reflected back to you in a personalized Navigating the Storm™ Report. Imagine leaving the seminar having identified which strategies make sense for you.
